What's New in the Libraries

Emory Libraries opened the doors to a new semester with new services and resources for students, faculty and staff. That includes self-serve 3D printers, a fifth recording studio, a new visual arts studio collaboration, a new coffee shop (Banjo's!), and a new one-stop webpage for new students called For Students. Learn about many other new and helpful aspects of the Libraries at the article below or on our What's New webpage.

Sandra Franklin uses recording studio for MLA presentation

In May, Woodruff Health Sciences Center Library director Sandra Franklin gave the Janet Doe Lecture at the Medical Library Association annual conference, an honor she was awarded at the previous year. But due to the pandemic restrictions, she needed to stream her lecture live, with a sustained, reliable internet connection – and Emory Libraries' new Streaming and Recording Studio was just what she was looking for.
